

College Success Checklist

— 5 WAYS —

TO FIND THE SCHOOL FOR YOU

Susquehanna
UNIVERSITY

*YOU'RE READY TO MEET
the future head-on, and you want to begin by finding your best college fit. The valuable information in this guide will help you identify the college that will prepare you for professional success in today's workforce. Read on to discover how to find the school that will help you meet the demands of a changing world!*

—1—

Get prepared for the global workplace.

Success in today's world requires more than just a college degree.

Employers also want people who have relevant experience and “success skills” such as ethical decision-making and strategic thinking. Schools that understand this offer the most robust internship and career development programs and consider this training integral to their academic mission.

At Susquehanna, career development lasts all four years and beyond – so students gain the important skills the global workforce demands before they graduate. Ninety percent of students complete an internship or experiential learning program, and our Career Development Center experts help students tailor their career aspirations to their interests, advise them about courses and connect them to internships. Faculty mentors also advise students about graduate school and career opportunities.

Consider the liberal arts and sciences.

Your success in the global community will be tied to your ability to collaborate with others, think critically, analyze information and translate ideas into action – all skills you'll develop with a comprehensive undergraduate education. Plus, student-centered liberal arts and sciences colleges have a proven track record of preparing students to succeed in whatever professional academic path they pursue.

What sets Susquehanna apart is our intentional blend of liberal arts competencies and professional experiences. Our students gain a broad-based intellectual foundation and focused preparation for a career. Here, we'll help you gain confidence in your unique abilities and develop a clear sense of purpose.

— 3 —

*Seek out
intercultural
competence.*

Studying abroad or taking part in other cross-cultural experiences in college will give you a perspective of the world you can't get in any other way – and the possibilities for self-discovery and personal growth are endless. Plus, you'll have an advantage in an increasingly interconnected world when you've seen firsthand how different social and cultural forces shape it.

Our award-winning Global Opportunities (GO) program is the only one of its kind in the nation and requires all students to complete an immersion experience (from two weeks to a full semester) in a culture different from their own, either in the United States or abroad. Students return feeling more self-confident, independent and ready to take on the world.

*Find an engaged,
diverse college
community.*

Schools that offer you a wide array of opportunities to get involved, express yourself and make a difference will expose you to an equally diverse and engaged community of students – a microcosm of the world itself. An environment like this is a great place to discover your own direction, what fuels your passions and how you can contribute to society.

Susquehanna students hail from 30 states and 31 countries, and almost every student lives on campus. Our residential setting exposes students to a diverse range of perspectives and interests – and serves as the driving force behind more than 150 campus organizations and a host of varsity, club and intramural sports ... not to mention the endless hours logged each year working in community service programs.

*Look for a college
that's making an impact.*

You can get a good sense of how well a college prepares its students for life in the global community by looking at the accomplishments of its alumni. Look for outcome statistics on college websites or testimonials by alumni who credit their college experience with empowering their success. This is a good way to gauge a school's effectiveness and get inspiration for charting your own course.

Susquehanna ranks in the top 10% nationally for graduate earnings. And our alumni are making an impact worldwide as CEOs, Peace Corps volunteers, novelists, coaches, scientists, doctors and more. That's because our students are inspired to excel while they're here, and they leave our campus ready to succeed in their chosen careers.

*Learn more about Susquehanna
during your
in-person or virtual campus visit.*

A great way to decide whether a school is right for you is by getting a closer look at campus, so we invite you to visit us in person or virtually! Whichever option you choose, you'll find out more about where our students live and learn, and get a closer look at our academic buildings, student facilities and first-year housing.

To schedule your on-campus or virtual visit, go to susqu.edu/visit. Or call the Office of Admission at 570-372-4260.

Susquehanna
UNIVERSITY